WHY THEY CHOSE CAPE COD

Mr. A casts for bass in one of the many inlets near his home.

He Fishes In Many Waters

Mr. and Mrs. A* moved to Cape Cod in 1954. Although they had long been familiar with the Cape and Islands neighborhood, they investigated many other areas before they made their decision.

A retired electrical engineer, Mr. A and his wife feel they have been richly rewarded by their move, in the many-sided life they lead.

"We found everything we wanted," says Mr. A. "I love to hunt and fish. There is good hunting in season, and fishing every month in the year. We knew there would be opportunities to participate in civic and community affairs, but we did not realize there were so many. Anyone who wants to contribute to public service can certainly do so through town committees and commissions, tax-payer associations, other service organizations and church activities. It would not be difficult to build up a full time job in this type of service.

"With improved roads, we find it so easy to slip away to Boston or New York for a few days when we have the urge."

Mr. and Mrs. A. are typical of many families who are moving to Cape Cod, including retired, semi-retired and those still active in business.

Living on the Cape is a "wonderful way of life", unique in many respects. Whether or not you are a sportsman, you can enjoy the abundance of natural beauty every season of the year. In the words of Thoreau, "A man may stand there and put all America behind him".

Winter is the "busy season" for Cape residents. There are concerts, lectures, classes in a wide range of subjects. Social life is relaxed and informal and club memberships are surprisingly inexpensive. Why not join in the move to Cape Cod? Write, giving your preference as to area and family requirements.

Who's Who in the Cast

TALLULAH BANKHEAD (Mary Hilliard) was a radiant rebel of sixteen when first she leveled her lance at the New York theatre. After four years of fitful employment in New York, she received her London christening in "The Dancers" in 1923. For the next eight years she was the toast of Soho and the Strand, a lovely heretic with a crazed and loyal following, no matter what her vehicle. Her London cycle embraced glittering roles in "This Marriage", "The Creaking Chair", "Fallen Angels", "The Green Hat", "They Knew What They Wanted", "The Gold Diggers", "Her Cardboard Lover", "The Lady of the Camelias" and "Let Us Be Gay." Baited by Paramount, she returned to our shores to star in six films, all of which she prefers to forget. Returning to the New York stage in "Forsaking All Others" (1935) she was greeted with critical cheers in a succession of plays, even though the reviewers found them unworthy of her talents. As Regina Giddens in "The Little Foxes", Miss Bankhead realized her dramatic potential, all hands agreeing that at long last here was a play and a role worthy of her mettle. Four years later the New York drama critics voted her Sabina in Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth" the best performance of the season by an actress. Shortly thereafter the New York screen critics cited her demonstration in Alfred Hitchcock's "Lifeboat" as tops for its term. Our playwrights laggard, or hostages to Hollywood, Miss Bankhead has created but three roles since she appeared as Sophie Wing, mercurial actress with bigamous notions, thirteen years ago. As eager for survival as the next Confederate she circumvented the wolf in revivals of "Private Lives", "The Eagle Has Two Heads", "Dear Charles" and "A Streetcar Named Desire." At odd moments she has cased and conquered radio, television, the lecture platform, and belles lettres, with the last named effort manifest in a best selling autobiography. Two summers ago she toured the summer circuit in her own revue, last summer in George Kelly's "Craig's Wife." Thrice she has invaded the Las Vegas casinos to fascinate their wastrels with song, dance and banter, for sums approximating a maharanee's ransom.

This week's play marks Miss Bankhead's return to the Cape Playhouse stage. In past years she has appeared here in "The Second Mrs. Tanquey", "Her Cardboard Lover", "Dear Charles" and "Welcome Darlings."

ESTELLE WINWOOD (Mrs. Windrew) is a familiar figure to American audiences through her critically acclaimed performances in a roster of Broadway hits, motion pictures and television. A native of England, where she is celebrated as one of its greatest actresses, Miss Winwood appeared on Broadway in "The Madwoman of Chaillot", which she played for 18 months in the New York run and later on the road. Before the Giraudoux success, she made a personal hit in a revival of Bernard Shaw's "Mrs. Warren's Profession", "Ladies in Retirement", as the Duchess of Berwick in the revival of "Lady Windermere's Fan", "Ten Little Indians" and "The Importance of Being Ernest", to name a few. Broadway audiences last saw her in "Speaking of Murder." A partial listing of her motion picture credits include "Gigi" with Leslie Caron, and the current releases "The Cabinet of Caligari" and "Magic Sword." She has just finished working with Kim Novak, Jack Lemmon and Fred Astaire in "Notorious Landlady", soon to be released. Television viewers have seen her on all major dramatic shows. In 1951 Miss Winwood appeared at the Cape Playhouse in "A Door to the Room."

RICHARD KENDRICK (Stanley Dale) was most recently seen on Broadway as the Admiral in "Golden Fleecing." His previous Broadway credits include "The Wisteria Tree" with Helen Hayes; "Two Blind Mice" with Melvyn Douglas and Jan Sterling; "Claudia", opposite Phyllis Thaxter; "Stars In Your Eyes", a musical comedy with Ethel Merman and Jimmy Durante; "Stage Door", opposite Margaret Sullavan; "Excursion", "Personal Appearance" and "Double Door." He also has appeared in a succession of roles in all the major television dramatic programs, including Studio One, Kraft Theatre, Philco Playhouse, Alcoa Theatre, U. S. Steel Hour and Armstrong Circle Theatre. No newcomer to the Cape Playhouse, Mr. Kendrick has been seen here in past seasons with Louise Platt, Imogene Coca and Jose Ferrer in Philip Barry's "Spring Dance"; with Cornelia Otis Skinner in "Biography"; with Joe E. Brown in "Elmer The Great"; and with Gertrude Lawrence in "Fallen Angels", to mention a few. He also appeared in the 1946 production of "Here Today", which starred Faye Emerson. At that time, he portrayed the role of Philip Graves. This past season Mr. Kendrick appeared on the daytime television series, From These Roots and Our Five Daughters.

PETER HOBBS (Philip Graves) recently completed an eight year run as star of the CBS-TV series, Secret Storm. While appearing daily on television, he still found time to perform in the theatre. Last year he co-starred with Peggy Cass in "The Thurber Carnival" in which he replaced Tom Ewell and, several sea-

He also has appeared on Broadway with Ingrid Bergman in "Joan of Lorraine", with Marlon Brando in "Truckline Cafe" and "Clutterbuck" with Arthur Margetson.

JILL KRAFT (Claire Windrew) replaced Pat Stanley in the Broadway production of "Blue Denim", appeared with Jose Ferrer in the City Center's revival of "Cyrano de Bergerac" and was understudy to Audrey Hepburn in "Gigi." New York audiences also will remember her portrayal of Catherine in "A View From the Bridge." She later recreated the role for the Group 20 Players at Wellesley, Mass. Miss Kraft has starred on all major dramatic television shows. For the past two and a half years she appeared on "Edge of Night" and, most recently, "As the World Turns."
